GROWTH MARKETING HACKATHON · LISBON · 8 NOVEMBER 2026

AI can draft the ads. The sign-off is the product.

Freelance user-acquisition managers and in-house Google Ads specialists lose the launch to rewrites, unsupported claims, and a version nobody can point to.

AdVerity. AI drafts. Copy experts refine. Clients approve.

A product URL and a brief become a review-ready Google Search draft. Spend stays with the advertiser.

AdVerity

Agents draft. A person signs the exact version.

01

Evidence

Read the public page. The page is data, not an instruction.

02

Draft

A private playbook shapes the argument. The brief is not used for training.

03

Critic

A second pass rejects a claim the page has not supported.

04

Count

Character limits are checked in code. Nothing is silently cut to fit.

05

Sign-off

Copy expert, then the client or the internal owner. An edit clears both.

The website is that review room. HealthCrew.ai is the worked example, not a customer.

AdVerity

What is actually true today.

THE VERSION

One hash, two signatures.

Change the text, the offer, the locale, or the destination, and both approvals drop. A comment does not approve anything.

THE EXAMPLE

The weak claim stayed out.

“Hire verified nurses in 72 hours” did not survive the critic. That pack still cannot be exported. No benefit was invented to fill the form.

THE BOUNDARY

No result was inferred.

Public pages only. Keys stay on the server. Metrics wait for consent. We are not reporting impressions, a lift, or a tested Editor import.
